A Fish Story.

On Friday, at Ocean View, Waikiki there was a scene of much commotion. A large shark was cavorting near the shure looking for something to eat. The laborers employed on the sea wall commenced to throw rocks, which were swallowed by the man-eater until he was satisfied. In the way of dessert the men working for the Water Company threw some ends of east-iron pipe (that cost the Government a dollar an ounce!) to the shark. He swallowed the iron with an evident relish.
